On Mission: The book of Psalms is all about the Mission of God, though the word "mission" is not very common in the book. It comes from the Latin verb mitto (noun missio), which parallels the Greek word apostellō, meaning "to send." It refers to God sending people to announce His work of judgment and redemption on earth, working in the world through faithful people to carry out His will.

Even the Old Testament, God sent deliverers such as judges, kings, prophets, and priests specifically to bless the people of Israel, and it was meant to go outward from there eventually. For example, God told Abraham that through his descendants "all the families of the earth shall be blessed" (Gen. 12:3). God told Israel in the wilderness that its obedience to God's laws would be a testimony to the nations of God's greatness (Deut. 4:6-8). King David urged, "Declare His glory among the nations, His marvelous works among all the peoples!" (1 Chron. 16:24; see Ps. 96:3). Psalm 22:27 looks forward to the day when all the nations turn to God and worship before him. Isaiah sees Israel becoming "a light for the nations," so that "salvation may reach to the end of the earth" (Isa. 49:6). Micah foresaw a day when many nations desire to come to Zion to learn God's ways (Mic. 4:2). But the Israelites were not entirely open to the idea of God extending his grace to Gentiles, as the attitude of Jonah shows (Jonah 4).

In the New Testament, the blessing of God completely pour out to the nations. The New Testament focus on mission consistently includes all the world rather than only the community of God's people. Jesus sent His disciples into the world just as he had been sent by God (John 17:18; 20:21). Missions are no longer done just by the specialists, such as prophets and priests. In fact, Jesus calls each one of us to live On Mission. Some are specially trained (Eph. 4:11-12), but it is the joyful responsibility of all believers. As followers of the Lord, believers are called to a life of humble service (Mark 10:42-45; 2 Cor. 4:5; Phil. 2:5-11). In fact, our jobs are one of the key ways in which Christians can be salt and light to the world (Matt. 5:13-16). Old Testament history shows that even in totally pagan environments, God's people—such as Daniel and his friends, Esther, and Ezekiel—bring glory to God and blessing to many people through their vocations. This remains true today.

After the resurrection, the heart of Jesus' teaching about His mission has been called the Great Commission, which in various forms appears at least four times in the Gospels (Matt. 28:18-20; Luke 24:45-49; John 17:18; 20:21) and twice in Acts (1:8; 10:42). Here the focus is on proclaiming the gospel of salvation through Christ to the nations, across culture, custom, and language. So to truly live On Mission means that we see the people around us as part of the world we are called to shine His light into! Are you On Mission?

Member DIRECTORY

It's time to update our online directory. Sign up sheets are available on the bulletin board in the Welcome Center for members to select a time for their new photograph to be taken for our directory. Bobbie Aldridge will be taking the portraits.

We will also have forms available for any updates to your listing. Our Elders prefer all of our photos have the same backdrop and poses and appreciate your cooperation with this project. We will no longer be using submitted photos in our directory. Once our photography is completed the new photographs will be placed in our directory app. If you cannot be available for one of the time slots we will add more as needed.

You will be able to purchase photos at your appointment but there is no obligation or fees.

Tips for a good portrait:

- Wear casual or formal clothing that you feel good in. Solid colors work best and it is best to avoid busy patterns as they can distract from your face.
- Darker clothing is more slenderizing. Sleeves work best as sleeveless tops tend to make your arms look fuller.
- Avoid glossy lipstick as it creates a shine in photos.
- If you wear glasses all the time you'll want to have them in your portraits.

Southside will play Edgewood Baptist Team 2 on Tuesday, July 16th, at 7:30 on Field 4.
